London Northwestern Railway launches podcast to help keep passengers up to date

Passengers travelling with London Northwestern Railway (LNR) are being invited to tune in on their train journey after the operator launched its first ever podcast.

The podcast – titled On The Rails – will answer some of passengers' frequently-asked questions about the railway as well as featuring insightful interviews with guests from across the industry.

So if you've ever wanted to know how temperatures are controlled on trains or how to buy the cheapest train ticket – or just hear about some of the quirky goings-on of the railway – On The Rails is the podcast for you.

Episode one is available now with a focus on railway safety and security. Listeners can also find out which famous passenger once caused excitement at Wolverhampton Station. Further episodes will be released throughout 2023.

Jonny Wiseman, LNR customer experience director, said:

"I am delighted to launch On The Rails. We are always looking for new ways to communicate with our customers and with the popularity of podcasts continuing to increase, I am looking forward to hearing what people think.

"Through the podcast we'll be answering some of our passengers' most-asked questions, explaining a bit more about how the railway works and enjoying plenty of quirky stories from all kinds of people across the industry."

Episode one of On The Rails is available here. The podcast is also available to stream via Spotify and Apple Music.
